

No. Although the Scout Programs of Adventure Scouts USA does instill true proficiency in outdoor skills, our modern programming also provides Scouts with many other important skills such as: developing leadership, instilling responsible citizenship through service to the greater community, and fostering friendships.

Some examples of other innovative activities in which Adventure Scouts USA Scouts can participate include building websites, creating comic books, basketball, skateboarding, cooking, producing videos, music or short films, building and racing soapbox derby cars, and much more.
